

Why has this to such sweet strains
 Whence we need not ask the cause?
 Good Christmas, here for moments lent
 The silent World is pausing;
 While, sweet, about planet glides the star,
 The Christ he brings, for us, for you
 Such, such, the Word made flesh,
 The Babe, the Son of Mary!

The babe, the innocent, gentle and sweet,
 Comes present, King to men, blessed
 The King of Kings, universal Prince,
 Can bring forth wisdom from
 Hebra, Judea, the song on high,
 The Virgin sings her lullaby
 Joy, joy, for Christ is born,
 The Babe, the Son of Mary!

A black and white photograph of a large, ornate building with classical architectural features. The building has multiple stories, with a prominent section featuring a series of columns and arches. There are several arched windows and doorways on the ground floor. The building appears to be made of stone or brick. The photograph is grainy and has a high-contrast, almost etched appearance.

an education. She numbers among her friends, Negro professors, teachers, physicians, lawyers, merchants, preachers, and also has many friends among the poor of the race. She is well educated, of course. Her taste in books runs to history, especially American history. She regularly reads the works of Negroes. Her interest in politics is keen, and current events is evident in her conversation. Her recreations are the theatre, baseball, football, and basketball.

PART TWO

His Last Request

By JULIA GRAY

EVER the little old beaming dining room had put on quite a festive appearance Christmas morning. It was rather odd, and the furnace was in its usual state of cozy reserve, but Fanny had stuck herself and everyone around the festive decorations of garlanded fish and "Highland Cattle," and each table had a brave sprig of mistletoe tied with crimson and green ribbon laid beside each plate. That was Beth's special offering.

As each member of the household came in the greetings were hearty and quite satisfactory, even to Beth. She had not thought the experiment would bring out even that much fellowship and good will from the silent, self-absorbed crowd at Mrs. Forbes'.

But the prettiest bunch of all and a card of Christmas cheer beside Mr. Bunchley's plate. Poor, lonely old Bunchley, nobody ever had a good word for him. In all the months that she had been an inmate of the Forbes domicile she couldn't remember that anyone had ever given him even a pleasant greeting. He came down stairs to breakfast late and always grumbling, grumbled at his food, which Carrie, the colored maid, laid across the table at him, grumbled at the furnace and weather and the mailman, at the boarders and Mrs. Forbes and life in general.

But Beth liked him best of all. That morning she had found outside her door a box of fresh violets and a book she had been waiting for. Instructed from her starchy friend, Alan Farley, it was the book more than the instruction that moved the thoughts of the giver. "The Way It Was," she had said. "As Beth glanced through it she had smiled, remembering a verse that Alan liked to repeat from Mrs. Browning:

"What shall I give to my beloved? A little faith all undivided."

That was what he gave to her, only he in small measure, in full rich measure, all his heart's faith and love, asking her to believe in him and be patient for his success. And she could not tell him that she didn't give a rap for his success; that she would rather have a hundred times over have married to him, even if she had kept on with her own work, and they had been running mates together. So between them was the promise of marriage and to the housewife's hope at large he was "a starchy friend."

"The old man's sick in bed," said Carrie briefly, as she swept the crumbs from Beth's plate. "He ain't coming down. He's groaning fearful."

Christmas Musing

Good gracious! Look what some brought! A stocking full of joy. And a Turkey Roast that couldn't get in. All for a good little boy.

"Now, you're just enough, Mr. Bunchley," she said.

Bunchley looked from one face to the other, one on each side of his bed, and his eyes glowed from under their lids, and he said, "I worked my life out for her; and she married a long-legged lout in the first town. I'm tailing you too, they will not wait too long. The sex is changeable. I've not lost my heart on seeing you married before I get another letter for the week."

"Oh, Mr. Bunchley, you're all right," began Beth, heartily, but he put his hand up warningly.

"Don't shock me or alarm me, and don't be arguing with me, neither; for my heart's no too strong at that. I've talked this story over and she slipped on quite over the straw to Jerry and be married right away, and I'll pay the bill. Get ready, then."

Alan's eyes began to be gleaming, but it was the old set face lying back on the pillows that moved her to set up as he wished, and she slipped to her own room without a word to say.

When they came back to the dining room, two o'clock on holidays, and as they came down stairs together Beth heard a voice in the dining room, a starchy friend, strong voice, Mr. Bunchley speaking.

"I had to use subterfuge of 'them,' he was saying. 'The way it was, I'm not so am I, and I've married them off safe and sound by making it my doing request. And when you get this letter, I'll be waiting for you to get them all cheer—'

The Birth of Christ

AND there were in the same country shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night. And lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone about them; and they were very afraid.

And the angels said unto them, 'Fear not, for behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people.

"For unto you is born this day in the city of David, the Son of God."

And this shall be a sign unto you; ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger."

And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God and saying, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men."

—St. Luke 2:8-14.
